All website design, text, graphics, audio, video, animation and interfaces, and the selection and arrangements thereof are copyright ©Bytes of Learning Incorporated (“Bytes of Learning”), all rights reserved. Any use of visual, audio, or text content on the UltraKey Online web application or web site, including reproduction, modification, distribution, or republication, without prior written permission of Bytes of Learning Incorporated is strictly prohibited. Some elements such as UltraKey Online guides include specific copying and sharing rights within them.

No Copyleft; No Open source; Code and Content Capture Prohibited

Copyleft refers to code or content that creators may use, but subsequently have to make any work incorporating the code or content available for public access and use. Open source refers to code or content made available for public use, which may not be copyrighted by developers after the open source is incorporated into the developer’s work.

UltraKey Online contains original content and code created by Bytes of Learning including but not limited to interface design, instructional processes, data processing procedures, text, graphics, audio, animation, video, and the selection and arrangements thereof. Nothing in UltraKey Online has been derived from Copyleft material, or open source material. Capturing any code or content from UltraKey Online, by whatever means, whether used in anybody's work or to guide anybody's work, is prohibited.

Good Faith Usage Required; No Hacking Tolerated

All subscription owners and people authorized by subscription owners, who use UltraKey Online, are required to use UltraKey Online in good faith. Good faith is breached by any effort to use the program in ways it is not intended, including but not limited to: attempting to break the application, accessing unauthorized areas of the program, or accessing record data that is outside the domain designated within the user's role.

Bytes of Learning makes every effort to secure and inhibit breaches of good faith, but it is not required to prevent all breaches, and it does not inherit responsibility for any breach simply by failing to prevent it. It is the user, who is responsible for any breaches of good faith or attempts to breach good faith. This behavior, usually called 'hacking', is not tolerated.

Bytes of Learning understands that schools and enterprises have limited control on the good faith they can demand from authorized users. Accordingly, Bytes of Learning invites subscribers to report breaches of good faith, and attempts to breach good faith to Bytes of Learning, so steps can be taken by Bytes of Learning to remedy the breach in collaboration with the subscription owner.

Notwithstanding, Bytes of Learning reserves the sole right to cancel subscriptions without refund, whenever good faith is breached or attempted to be breached, either by the subscription owner, or any party authorized by the subscription owner to use UltraKey Online. Additionally, Bytes of Learning reserves the sole right to pursue any party including the subscription owner and any users of the owner's subscription, for breaking good faith as discussed herein. Bytes of Learning shall pursue any lawful measures and damage remedies available to it, under any law.
